LUTHERAN CENTER FOR RELIGIOUS LIBERTY

Dear Friends,

When Christians engage the public realm — full of philosophies, ideologies and appetites emanating from sinful, broken people just like us — we know that there is work to do to keep things sane, humane, just and safe.

But that work is part of God's greater work to get the ultimate message of Christ out there for all to hear. Keep it safe, so the Church can speak. Keep it just, so chaos is kept at bay. Give us rules to live by in peace, so there can be opportunities to share a message of grace over the fences of neighbors living side by side in peace.

Two distinct ways, two kingdoms, two specific types of engagement, yet one mission: to bless the world now and forever. Will you partner with me in learning more, having dynamic conversations and working side by side for the good of our country and our neighbors? Let's get started.

Rev. Dr. Gregory Seltz

What does the Lutheran Center for Religious Liberty do?

ENCOURAGE:

We support those who are working hard to protect religious liberty, the sanctity of life, basic protections for traditional marriage, and private and parochial education.

EDUCATE:

We serve LCMS churches, schools, universities, pastors and laypeople, because Christians need to be prepared to engage public issues for the sake of the community and Gospel.

ADVOCATE:

We speak on behalf of churches, schools and universities, because the government is encroaching into the arena of the Church and because God's people have a role in sharing the Gospel and helping society be civil and just.

Text LCRL to 444999 to receive the "Word from the Center" devotions and D.C. updates.
