Interchurch Relationships of the LCMS

Interchurch relationships of the LCMS have been growing by leaps and bounds in the last triennium. In addition to our growing family of official “Partner Church” bodies with whom the LCMS is in altar and pulpit fellowship, the LCMS also has a growing number of “Allied Church” bodies with whom we collaborate in various ways but with which we do not yet have altar and pulpit fellowship. We presently have thirty-nine official partnerships that have already been recognized by the LCMS in convention as well as good relationships with an additional forty-three Allied Church bodies, many of whom are in various stages of fellowship talks with the LCMS.

In addition, the LCMS also has fourteen “Emerging Relationships” with Lutheran church bodies that we are getting to know but with whom we do not yet have a formal relationship. Most of these have approached the LCMS out of a desire to share our solid, biblical theology.

These various relationships make for a total of nearly one hundred Lutheran church relationships in a total of seventy-five countries! This represents nearly twenty-two million people.

Lastly, the LCMS also has a growing number of “Ecumenical Relationships” with non-Lutheran church bodies for the sake of dialogue and cooperatio in externis.

The International Lutheran Council (ILC)

Many of the church bodies with which the LCMS cooperates are members of the International Lutheran Council (ILC). The origins of the ILC can be traced to a meeting of leaders of confessional Lutheran churches in Uelzen, Germany, in July 1952. A second meeting was held in 1959 in Oakland, Calif., to discuss the topic “The Fellowship Between Our Churches.” This was followed in 1963 by a third meeting in Cambridge, England, where the name “International Lutheran Theological Conference” was chosen for these informal international gatherings. During the next three decades, 11 more informal gatherings of the heads of confessional Lutheran churches took place. The ILC as a council of church bodies officially came into existence in 1993 in Antigua, Guatemala, with the adoption of a constitution by representatives from Lutheran church bodies from all six continents.

Confessional Basis

The ILC is a worldwide association of established confessional Lutheran church bodies that proclaim the Gospel of Jesus Christ on the basis of an unconditional commitment to the Holy Scriptures as the inspired and infallible Word of God and to the Lutheran Confessions contained in the Book of Concord as the true and faithful exposition of the Word of God.

Objectives

The ILC exists for the purpose of encouraging, strengthening and promoting confessional Lutheran theology and practice centering in Jesus Christ, both among member churches and throughout the world:

- By providing opportunities for the joint study of contemporary theological issues;
- By giving mutual support and encouragement to the heads of member church bodies;
- By encouraging and assisting member churches in planning for mission outreach;
- By strengthening theological education through conferences of theologians and seminary teachers, mission staffs and those involved with human care;
- By facilitating communication between confessional Lutheran churches of the world through the publication of ILC news; and
- By stimulating and facilitating the preparation and publication of confessional Lutheran literature.

Organizational Structure

The ILC has three officers: a chairman, a vice-chairman and a secretary. An Executive Committee made up of the officers and one representative from each of its five world areas (Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and North America) is responsible for implementing the objectives of the ILC. An executive secretary, working under the general supervision of the Executive Committee, also helps implement the objectives. Member church bodies contribute, on an annual basis, financial support (based on their baptized membership and the GNP of the country in which it exists) for the costs of operating the ILC. The council has 38 participating church bodies. ILC meetings take place on a three-year cycle: In year one, regional meetings take place; in year two, the entire council meets in conference; and in year three, a conference of representatives from each of the ILC seminaries is held.
