STRONG FAITH, FERVENT LOVE

God's Salvific Will

In his book on missions, Detlev Schulz says, "All missionary endeavors should be seen not merely as an extended arm of the church, but as an instrument of God's saving and loving desire to embrace the whole world. As God's positive will for fellowship and union with man motivated Him to send His son to the cross, so too, God's salvific will motivates Him to take the church into His service. Through the activities of His preached and sacramental Word, God wishes to bring the entire world into His loving fellowship."¹

Imagine if you will, in our own congregations, if we took this concept as a call to action. Indeed, we are motivated by the Gospel of Christ to reach out to give witness to Him who "called us out of darkness

Pastors Leading Churches with Schools

by Rev. Dr. Nathan Meador

A congregation with a school is truly a blessed place. With generations of students formed for faith and life in the world as servants of God, these congregations are inextricably linked to their school ministry. However, as those generations have passed, there are increasing pressures placed upon congregations with schools. It costs more today to teach each student than ever before. Staffing costs including salary and benefits, curriculum costs and the inclusion of and maintenance for ever-changing technology have raised the cost to alarming levels. It is critical that congregational leaders take a serious look at their education ministry.

As the challenges arise, there is temptation to cut corners. There are those who hire teachers not trained in the Synod. Others simply balance the ever-challenging budget on the backs of the faithful workers by freezing salary, increasing benefit contributions and the like. When this happens, there is a rise in "institutional survival" mode. This is a mentality that says that the institution must be preserved at all cost. This makes most congregations adverse to even considering other options for educational ministry.

For educational ministry to survive and thrive, corners must not be cut. Aggressive, out-of-the-box ideas must be pursued if the local Lutheran school is going to be the ministry that the Lord has given it to be. We will explore some of those options in the upcoming webinar on this topic on Aug. 16, 2018. Join us to add to the conversation. We will likely raise more questions than provide answers. But this is a critical conversation to be had!

Rev. Dr. Nathan Meador is senior pastor at St. John Lutheran Church and School in Plymouth, Wis. He also serves as assistant coordinator for LCMS Stewardship Ministry.

into His marvelous light." As Paul reminds us in 2 Cor. 5:14–15, "For the love of Christ controls us, because we have concluded this: that one has died for all, therefore all have died; and he died for all, that those who live might no longer live for themselves but for him who for their sake died and was raised." Here we find the joyous motivation to be the church in service to Christ with the mission to extend His loving message of salvation to all of those among whom we live, work and play. What a privilege it is for us to carry out this mission. So, as you plan and strategize, think and do, remember the reason why it is that we do all of the things that we do — we "are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for his own possession, that you may proclaim [His] excellencies" (1 Peter 2:9).
